The Willie Banks Story

MALACO GOLD

Jackson, MS-Like many gospel artists, Banks was singing in public by the time he hit kindergarten. He formed his own group, Willie Banks and The Southernaires in 1968 and was quickly snatched up by the Peacock-Songbird label. His debut record, Heaven Must Be A Beautiful Place received favorable reviews for its soulful original style with cuts all penned by Banks. In 1972, Banks moved his group to the HMS label out of Nashville, TN, changing his group's name to Willie Banks and The Messengers. All four albums released on HMS, God's Goodness, For The Wrong I've Done, Mother Why, and Still In Charge, kept them at the forefront of gospel music and each landed on Billboard's Top 40 Chart. By 1979, they earned a Grammy nomination for Traditional Male Group of the Year. Though tragedy befell the group when their van careened off the road in 1981, killing one member, Banks, who was thrown from the vehicle, survived. He vowed to God that if his life was spared, he would "...sing God's praises as long as his tongue would move," which he did. Signed to Malaco Records in 1988, Banks and the Messengers continued to record outstanding gospel music (Look at the Blessings, Masterpiece, In Concert). Banks passed away on February 1, 1993, however The Messengers can still be found "...pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ."
